Thieves paddle away on Exeter River

New Hampshire school still looking for a suitable location

Concord considered: The school will have about 12 to 15 students in the first year and about 40 in four years.

Michael Beaudoin, the headmaster of Pembroke Academy High School, said his willingness to spearhead the charter school effort is based on several factors:

1. The school is within the Pembroke School District. How-
2. Pembroke residents will not have to travel far to get to school.
3. Pembroke residents wanted the school.

Michael Beaudoin, the headman of Pembroke Academy High School, said his willingness to spearhead the charter school effort is based on several factors:

1. The school is within the Pembroke School District. How-
2. Pembroke residents will not have to travel far to get to school.
3. Pembroke residents wanted the school.

By DAN O'BRIEN
White Hart Lane, May 1 — Police believe two men who used a canoe along this portion of the Exeter River in Fremont are responsible for several thefts from vehicles at homes on the river.

On Monday, only in print edition

Theft of vehicles.

drive to Pembroke, Al-

A Laconia man Tuesday.

On Tuesday, police re-

On Monday, only in print edition

Theft of vehicles.

A Laconia man Tuesday.

On Tuesday, police re-

On Monday, only in print edition

Theft of vehicles.

Finance

Doddging debt

The small situation for retirement is to enter debt-

But that’s not the case for many consumers who are carrying high levels of credit card debt as they’re: overcrowding their retirement accounts.

According to a new survey, 56 percent of retirees had outstanding debts when they left the workforce — and 96 percent refused to delay retirement because of the outstanding debt.

Sports

Grading the B's

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the

Hockey beat writer

Ian Clark reports on the
Warren, a Republican, said Tuesday that she was "sickened to the soul" by the thefts and vowed to pursue an investigation. She has scheduled a hearing on the right-to-know legislation for Wednesday, and she has expressed interest in working with Governor John Lynch to review future building projects and apply any determinations to past promises. "Kids can't stop coming to school because of the construction," she said. "But as they see new things, such as the arts center and the turf athletic fields, they know what is coming and have been very patient."

Former Governor John Lynch said: "It's a little bit annoying," he said, referring to the construction. "But we are getting a brand new school. Based on what I have seen in the arts center, I can't wait to walk in."

Bruce Farr, a former agriculture science teacher at the Regional Vocational Technical Education Center on the campus of Kingston Regional High School in Wolfeboro. "Agricultural science is high-tech now," said Farr. "We need that new building on an entire level in our field no one are fielding or doing when they come in." Farr said the center's academic year placed in first place in the entire state and is the lowest in the country in this academic year.

Gov. Wentworth schools make a makeover

Top to bottom: Improvements range from energy-efficient lighting to new science labs.

By KEVIN SPER

Penacook (southeast of Concord) will lose a school this summer and take a new one in its place on the heels of a $16.8 million rebate that comes as the state. PACE has received $613,000 in PACE rebates, which are intended to be used for energy-efficient improvements, such as those done to the new building.

Dalianis said of the Legislature: "They're not going to look at this law and say, "We think the boy was conscious."

As he was falling you could hear him scream," said Zach Allard.

"It's kind of wet (on top)," Linehan said. "They made sure he was a good spot to be where we're going to be safe when it's going to be covered.

Three federally recognized tribes have filed a lawsuit against the federal government to block the building of the USFS facility. The tribes are unenrolled in the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe, the Aquinnah Wampanoag Tribe, and the Wampanoag Tribe of Taunton. They claim that the project would have a substantial and disproportionate impact on their cultural, religious, and other interests.